Published every six months, the Regional Economic Report (RER) offers an analysis of the Colombian economy from the general perspective, trade as a sector, government agencies and users of the information.

The RER is regional in content and covers the various geographical areas that make up the country. It is a magazine that brings the topics it addresses, which are macroeconomic, sectoral, financial and research in nature.

The RER originated with an agreement between Ecuador's República and DANF, which is part of government entities that have become involved in this endeavor as well as chambers of commerce and industry.
